Whose Postage are we Paying?

The State of Rhode Island not only pays to the Post Office Department every penny expended by that department for her service, including expenses of every description, but a clear profit of some $23,000 per annum. One would think this a handsome gratuity for so small a state to a fund, which, if it were divided in the just proportion of the revenue collected, ought to leave the whole of that sum in the pockets of our fellow citizens. But when we find ourselves after such an overpayment called on to contribute our share to a deficiency of $2,800,000—in other words to pay in all at least five thousand dollars a year to the General Government for mail transportation over and above what it earns of us, it naturally suggests the inquiry, whose postage are we paying beside our own?

This question becomes particularly interesting when attempts are made to increase still further the tax and the inequality by raising the rates of postage, for the avowed purpose of dispensing with another means of revenue, vitally important to Rhode Island, in a higher tariff. From whom no these propositions come? Uniformly from States whose own mail routes and offices are sustained by contributions like that we are compelled to pay, and whose people have little to lose by higher rates. For it must be remembered that high postage bears with special hardship only on active commercial communities. For the interchange of social letters and of occasional business correspondence, it makes little difference to the individual whether postage is high or low, his whole annual expenditure in that way is trifling. But wherever there is a centre of commerce or manufactures, wherever men are the factors and suppliers of a vast extent of country beyond their own borders, there a penny or two extra on each letter swells to vast sums in the course of the year and makes a serious drawback on their prosperity, a clog to trade. Two cents extra on each letter would make an additional tax on every man, woman and child in Rhode Island of twenty cents per annum; the same in Virginia, one of less than nine cents. It is very shrewd, therefore, of Senator Hunter, while he battles against any revenue measure which shall even incidentally benefit our interests, to substitute for it one, the burden of which falls upon us in a ratio more than double that of his own State.

These calculations are made from the official report of the Postmaster General for the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1857, the last which has been published. While we are on the subject it is well to look a little further at the facts presented in that report. We find that only five states of the Union pay a surplus of postage: Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania, New Hampshire just pays expenses. All the rest drain off not only this surplus but a vast sum besides from the common treasury to make up deficiencies, varying from $7,000 in Delaware to the enormous sum of $524,000 in the single state of Louisiana. When we come to classify the states geographically we find that New England as a whole overpays $183,000, we give round numbers throughout beside its contribution to the final deficiency of $2,800,000. The middle states (New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania) overpay $120,000. The western free states fail to pay their own postage by $716,000; the states of the Pacific and the territories by $267,000; and the slave states (not a single one yielding a surplus) overpay no less than $2,129,000.

We place the Pacific states and territories in a class by themselves because their deficiencies are small and because they have peculiar claims for indulgence. If we are to contribute to other peoples' postage at all, it certainly should be where new settlements are struggling with the wilderness and where the mail goes as the pioneer of population and of intelligence. But that old and long-settled states, with no such claim, and with little if any prospects of relative growth in the future should come thus as paupers to the common treasury certainly suggests that there is a defect in the system somewhere. Yet the five Atlantic slave states from Maryland south, the least progressive of the Union, overdraw more than all the Western free states together. If we compare the newer states among themselves, Wisconsin and Iowa with Texas and Arkansas, we find that the two former with a hundred thousand inhabitants between them overdraw about $16,000, while the two latter overdraw $954,000 or nearly nine times that amount.

But the subject cannot be exhausted in a single article and we shall resume it tomorrow.

The new press invented by Moses Y. Beach, which feeds itself and prints both sides of a page in one impression, is now in use in the New York Sun office.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

LECTURE ON MUSIC.—The crowded state of our columns since Monday, has prevented our giving the lecture of Mr. Tourjee the notice which it deserves; and even now we are constrained to devote to it much less space than we could wish.

After some preliminary remarks, half apologetical, for appearing before an audience in the (to him) new character of lecturer, Mr. T., proceeded to the consideration of his subject.

Music, he said, was a noble science. It was an emotional being, having an elevated origin, though like its intellectual sister Poetry, often forced to become the handmaid of debasing sensualism. The pantomime of the theatre, the buffoonery of the circus, and the ministry of those who make an occasional advent among us under the assumed name of artistes, to exhibit the peculiarities of negro life, display a lamentable perversion of the true design of musical talent. The people, he said, while they begrimed the trifles required to sustain intellectual and classical entertainments, will without demur pay largely for pantomimic buffoonery. Music was designed to subserve a higher purpose than to pamper the debased passions of our nature. It was born in heaven when "the morning stars sang together and all the sons of God shouted for joy." Music was born to celebrate the praise of God, and to add lofty expression to the devotion and reverence of cherubim and seraphim; and on earth, Music has made her advent in close and appropriate alliance with religion. No heart was so adamantine, but it could be moved, mellowed and inspired by music. The lecturer then went on to demonstrate why this was so, and why Music exercises the influence it does on the realms of emotion.

The closing portion of the lecture was devoted to an exposition of a reformatory movement in the manner of teaching Music, which has obtained in many of the larger cities of this country and Europe, and which Mr. Tourjee has introduced here, maintaining that by it the principal difficulties in the way of the acquirement by pupils of the science of music are removed. It abolishes the transposition of syllables, a failing to comprehend which has discouraged so many in their attempts to master the science.

The lecture was largely attended, every seat being filled. The matter of the lecture was excellent.

Mr. Tourjee has done, and is doing, much to advance the cause of music in Newport, and we wish him that success which his zeal and talent so richly merit.

At its close, Master James Wilson, aged 15 years, executed with admirable skill on the piano, La Marseillaise Fantasie Brillante. He was warmly applauded, and an attempt made by the audience to bring him out the second time, but without success. Master Wilson has a decided talent for music, which properly cultivated will eventually constitute him a superior pianist.

COURT RECORD,

SUPREME COURT, THIRD DAY.

The Court was occupied yesterday morning in the trial of the action John M. Haile et al. vs. David P. Hall, before Ch. J. Ames and a jury. Mr. Curry for plaintiffs, Mr. Potter for defendant.

This was an action brought on two notes, one of $117,00 the other of $158,10. On the first the defendant was sued as endorser, and the plaintiff not being supplied with legal evidence of notice of non-payment was defeated. To the other, of which the debt was maker, the defence was usury, it being claimed that this note was given for part of anurious loan made by the plaintiffs in October 1855, at which time they purchased of the defendant E. M. Smith's note for $400 at a rate of discount greater than seven per cent. The whole transaction occurred in New York and was of course governed by the laws of that state, not only in regard to the rate allowed but to the penalty for excess which is there a forfeiture of the entire debt.

The defendant and his clerk and Louriston Hall, one of the plaintiffs, were examined at length. It was proved that the $800 note was an accommodation note made for defendant's benefit, and was purchased by plaintiff, (though without knowledge of that fact) at a discount of two per cent, per month: that it was afterwards renewed from time to time at legal rates, and gradually reduced by payment until the note in suit was given in Jan. 1857, for the balance then due.

Mr. Potter then read in evidence New York decisions showing that the usurious taint of the original transaction followed the debt in spite of the substitution of other securities or renewals of the same. None of these however reached the case of a renewal for a part only of the original loan.

The Court therefore ruled that as the interpretation by the New York Courts of their own statute must be fully proved as a question of fact in this forum, the defence of usury was not fully made out, and instructed the jury to find for the plaintiffs, which they did, assessing the damages at $178,00.

The jurors in attendance were then dismissed until the 29th day of March next and the Court adjourned to meet on Monday March 28th at half-past four P. M., at which time they will take up the dockets of petitions.

Jury trials will commence Tuesday the 29th, beginning with the criminal dockets.

Good!—We learn that a number of our public spirited citizens, desirous of fostering the love of music and cultivating musical taste, have signed a letter to Dr. Wood and those associated with him in the Philharmonic Society, inviting them to give another concert. The paper contains already a goodly number of influential names. As there are doubtless many others who would be glad of an opportunity to do so, the same papers for that purpose will for a few days be left at the stores of B. Marsh, B. J. Tilley and Wm. Newton. All favorable to the object are invited to aid. For the honor of Newport we hope this Society will be generously sustained, and are glad that this step has been taken.

In our report of the meeting at the State House, yesterday, we said "Mr. Smith of Massachusetts, addressed the audience." We have since learned that Mr. Smith is a native of Newport, and has resided in Providence for the past ten years. He was born in heaven when "the morning stars sang together and all the sons of God shouted for joy." Music was born to celebrate the praise of God, and to add lofty expression to the devotion and reverence of cherubim and seraphim; and on earth,

Newport has no reason to be ashamed of this, her eloquent and earnest son.

Our friend of the New Bedford Mercury has strange notions of geography. He prints in Tuesday's paper a "LETTER FROM HAVANA" dated at Nassau (New Providence,) and describing the latter place. Is there a school Atlas in New Bedford?

The Union Prayer Meeting will be held this evening in the Second Baptist Church, at the usual hour.

Later From Europe.

The Africa arrived at New York on Tuesday with news from Europe to 5th February. She brings the Queen's speech at the opening of Parliament, of which the following extracts will be interesting here.

I have great satisfaction in announcing to you that the Emperor of the French has abolished a system of negro emigration from the coast of Africa, against which was unavoidably tending, however guarded to the encouragement of the slave trade.

My Government has never ceased to address to His Imperial Majesty its most earnest, but friendly representations.

This wise act on the part of his Imperial Majesty induces me to hope that negotiations, now in progress at Paris, may tend to the total abandonment of the system, and to the substitution of a duly regulated supply of substantially free labour.

The state of the Republic of Mexico, distracted by civil war, has induced me to carry forbearance to its utmost limits in regard to wrongs and indignities to which British residents have been subjected at the hands of the two contending parties. They have at length been carried to such an extent, that I have been compelled to give instructions to the commander of my naval forces in those seas, to demand, and if necessary, to enforce due reparation.

The marriage of Prince Napoleon and the Princess Clotilde of Sardinia was solemnized on the 30th day of January.

The young Princess is a pretty girl, fair, with light hair, a red reticence, and a striking family likeness to her father. She looks what she is, a tenderly nurtured child fresh from the nursery. Her appearance is even more juvenile than the register of birth would indicate.

The Ionian Parliament, after having unanimously declared for union with Greece, passed a resolution to elect a Parliamentary Committee for the purpose of considering what further means should be taken. Mr. Gladstone, in consequence, addressed a message to the Parliament, stating that this resolution was contrary to the Constitution, and advising that the Committee be merely empowered to address a petition to Queen Victoria. Acting on this, Mr. Gladstone was furnished with the Address of the Committee to the Queen, with a request to lay before the great Powers their desire for a union with Greece.

The London Times, in some extended remarks on the Atlantic Telegraph, says that the tests for faults give such results as almost to lead to the belief that continuity has ceased and the wire is completely parted. Nevertheless, in spite of this most discouraging state of things, there are not wanting able men who express themselves confident that the wire is still capable of being restored to good working order. One of these gentlemen, possessed of considerable skill and experience, proposes to better the earth connections of the wire, and then charge the wire itself till in a state of electrical equilibrium, and so keep it in circuit with a battery, and, on the make and break principle, disturb the electricity in the wire and transmit the signal. The proprietor of this scheme thinks that even if the conducting wire is parted, he can still transmit signals along the outer covering of spiral wires. It is stated that when the words "Henley" and "You understand" were recently received at Newfoundland, the station at Valentia was locked up and deserted. In reference to the application of the Company for a Government guarantee on a new capital, the writer suggests that it is the principle of a guarantee for a new submarine line to India is admitted, it is difficult to see how it can be withheld from a line to America, for none can tell when such events may occur as will render telegraphic communication with Canada not only desirable but of vital importance. During even the brief time that the cable was in use, one message alone, countermanding the embarkation of the 20th and 22d regiments for India, probably saved England some £50,000 sterling.

The Court therefore ruled that as the interpretation by the New York Courts of their own statute must be fully proved as a question of fact in this forum, the defence of usury was not fully made out, and instructed the jury to find for the plaintiffs, which they did, assessing the damages at $178,00.

All favorable to the object are invited to aid. For the honor of Newport we hope this Society will be generously sustained, and are glad that this step has been taken.

After some preliminary remarks, half apologetical, for appearing before an audience in the (to him) new character of lecturer, Mr. T., proceeded to the consideration of his subject.

Music, he said, was a noble science. It was an emotional being, having an elevated origin, though like its intellectual sister Poetry, often forced to become the handmaid of debasing sensualism. The pantomime of the theatre, the buffoonery of the circus, and the ministry of those who make an occasional advent among us under the assumed name of artistes, to exhibit the peculiarities of negro life, display a lamentable perversion of the true design of musical talent. The people, he said, while they begrimed the trifles required to sustain intellectual and classical entertainments, will without demur pay largely for pantomimic buffoonery. Music was designed to subserve a higher purpose than to pamper the debased passions of our nature. It was born in heaven when "the morning stars sang together and all the sons of God shouted for joy." Music was born to celebrate the praise of God, and to add lofty expression to the devotion and reverence of cherubim and seraphim; and on earth,

Newport has no reason to be ashamed of this, her eloquent and earnest son.

Good!—We learn that a number of our public spirited citizens, desirous of fostering the love of music and cultivating musical taste, have signed a letter to Dr. Wood and those associated with him in the Philharmonic Society, inviting them to give another concert. The paper contains already a goodly number of influential names. As there are doubtless many others who would be glad of an opportunity to do so, the same papers for that purpose will for a few days be left at the stores of B. Marsh, B. J. Tilley and Wm. Newton. All favorable to the object are invited to aid. For the honor of Newport we hope this Society will be generously sustained, and are glad that this step has been taken.
